“We are also interested in how a company measures and tests its culture—at all levels of seniority and throughout its operations—and how it uses the data from that testing to embed and continuously improve its ethical culture.

There is a separate question of whether a company is demonstrating an ethical culture in practice.

Do employees feel empowered to bring issues and questions to the management’s attention?

Are managers and compliance officers providing ethical advice to salespeople even though such advice may mean loss of business?”

“...we will be focusing on corporate culture as one of the many, growing intangible value drivers that affect a company’s ability to execute its long-term strategy”

“...studies show that intangibles such as corporate culture are driving a greater share of corporate value, precisely because the challenges of change and innovation are growing more acute.”

How are you measuring your ethical culture?

How are you measuring your ethical culture?

Practices from the 2022 World's Most Ethical Companies
(n=136)

Key Takeaways

Surveys are ubiquitous (and remote employee-friendly)

There is more than one approach to measure ethical culture

Leading companies employ multiple methods to assess their ethical culture

What type(s) of surveys are used?

What type(s) of surveys are used?

Practices from the 2022 World's Most Ethical Companies
(n=136)

Key Takeaways

Once again, HR-led engagement surveys most used

On the rise: exit questionnaires +15 points year over year (likely turnover driven)

More companies adopting pulse-type surveys

SAMPLING BIAS

" WE RECEIVED 500 RESPONSES AND FOUND THAT PEOPLE LOVE RESPONDING TO SURVEYS "

How you segment employees can limit – or enhance – your analysis

Start with the end in mind

Try for consistency in data structures across sources

Existing taxonomies likely already exist – no need to reinvent the wheel!

Use the survey to generate what you don't already have

Using other survey efforts as a guide for reception

How has the company responded to other survey collection efforts in the past?

Have opinions been ignored?

What goodwill (or headwinds) are you up against?

A comprehensive communications strategy is fundamental

Sending surveys using only email no longer suffice

Persuasion by senior, local, regional leaders, champion programs

Consider incentives (but be careful)

Have considerations in place for pre-, mid-, and post-survey

Tips for Developing Your Own Effort to Measure

Key takeaway. There is no universally right answer on how many employees to survey.

Consideration #1: Beware of Survey Fatigue

Employees were heavily surveyed in COVID era

Other efforts recently undertaken?

Can you 'piggyback' off existing efforts?

Consideration #2: Assess Appetite for Change

Are leaders prepared and equipped to handle results?

Limited support may mean limited scope

Build your case with a pilot program

Consideration #3: Your Environment is Unique

How challenging is it to get ahold of employees?

Are you conflicting with other, company-wide efforts?

The opportunity cost of surveys

Strategies for Gathering Enough Data

Key takeaway. Make it as easy as possible to take your survey.

Use survey skip logic

Present only relevant questions and topics to relevant audiences

Reduce question length

Reduce mental load by using no more than 90 characters

Clearly define terms

For example, “senior leader” can mean a variety of roles

Ask one question at a time

Check all “or” and “and” statements

An example. Ask one question at a time.

“My company’s disciplinary guidelines have been clearly communicated to me and/or I am aware of the consequences of misconduct.”

“Somewhat disagree”

Are guidelines not clear or is there a lack of awareness of consequences?

Not actionable!

Engagement Surveys Limitations

The reality: compliance teams given question 'budget'

Leverage as a complimentary source of culture data

Behavior-driven questions are ideal (Do you know where to find the code?)

Priority question set (see word doc)

Focus on...

1. Did you see something,
2. Did you say something about what you saw?
3. Who did you tell it to?
4. What was your experience in doing so?

Leverage manager-related questions to supplement findings – consider correlations/crossing opportunities

Do I have the information I need to fulfil my role? Levels of comfort w/ mgr?

(Eric's prior experience)

Measuring ethical Culture in the Context of Program Effectiveness

1. whether and how the company responds to prior misconduct

“Companies that have effectively deployed capabilities to conduct independent monitoring and testing of all elements of their compliance program, not just their financial controls—for example, testing effectiveness of training, communications, and compliance culture—and made improvements to the compliance program as a result, set themselves apart”

We Expect to See a Program That is...

Well-Designed	policies and procedures are easily accessible and understandable to the company's employees and business partners has established a process for reporting violations of law or company policy that encourages employees to speak up without fear of retaliation, and that those reports are taken seriously, appropriately documented, investigated, and—if substantiated—remediated.
Adequately resourced and empowered to function effectively	Is compliance promoted as a resource?
	A company's commitment to promoting compliance and ethical values at all levels—from the chief executive on down to middle and lower-level managers—is critical.
Works in Practice	We are also interested in how a company measures and tests its culture—at all levels of seniority and throughout its operations—and how it uses the data from that testing to embed and continuously improve its ethical culture.

There is a separate question of whether a company is demonstrating an ethical culture in practice. Do employees feel empowered to bring issues and questions to the management's attention? Are managers and compliance officers providing ethical advice to salespeople even though such advice may mean loss of business?

Just as we use data analytics to detect and combat criminal schemes, we urge corporations to consider what data analytic tools they can use to monitor compliance with laws and policies within their operations and to ferret out wrongdoing when it occurs.
